

RESEARCH

The department is involved in different areas of reearch including routine as well as special histopathological procedures including examination of slides, immunohistochemical studies, forensic odontology, cytological smears and routine blood investigations and its role in dentistry.